Introduction

As in any city, Barcelona residents have access to certain services such as transport, education, social services and health care, and they share public spaces in the streets and neighbourhoods. Using these services is a collective right, which in a democracy is determined by the policy decisions made by city council or parliamentary representatives.

Citizens choose their councillors via elections, which are one of many ways to participate. But citizen participation goes much further than voting in elections. Policy decisions, which affect all citizens, should not be limited to interactions between different political parties. Citizens need to have an active presence in proposals, opinions and initiatives.

Complex societies such as ours encompass a wide range of interests, which may contradict each other and which require rich and innovative solutions. In a democracy, as many different perspectives and outlooks as possible need to be heard and considered when making policy decisions. Pluralism is a value within a democratic system.

A democracy that incorporates this plurality consistently, inclusively and directly is the ideal system to achieve a better quality of life, fight inequality, obtain higher rates of justice and equality and for personal and community aspirations to develop with freedom and dignity.

That said, for a democracy to truly be transformative and representative of this wealth of perspectives, we need channels that recognise citizens as active subjects. Channels that ultimately allow their voices and ideas to be heard, expanding the spaces for dialogue and for the opportunity for collective proposals to be made.

Over the years, Barcelona, its inhabitants, social organisations and the other players that make up the city have consistently tried to improve the democratic quality of the city. This legacy has now been consolidated and shaped into the Regulation for Citizen Participation, with the aim of providing different channels for city residents to exercise their right to participation and thereby demonstrate their transformative energy.

What you will find in this guide

Barcelona City Council has created these guides as a simple way for anyone living in Barcelona to familiarise themselves with the Regulation for Citizen Participation and to discover and use all the related resources available.

The participation system described in this Regulation brings together three channels:

- Participatory processes
- Participatory bodies
- Citizen consultations

All three may be instigated by the City Council or through a citizens' initiative. In other words, citizens have the opportunity and ability to set any of these channels in motion. Citizens can also make regulatory proposals (byelaws and regulations) and instigate actions by government bodies in the city or district by proposing points for their meeting agendas.

Even though the Regulation has a system in place to guarantee the efficacy and efficiency of these channels, the best way to ensure this is for citizens to use them regularly.

To bring it into force, a regulation needs to be put into practice in the social sphere, not just published in an official organ. We therefore suggest that citizens of Barcelona make it their own: only then will it become truly useful and innovative.

The following guide refers to citizens' initiatives.

Citizens' initiatives

What are they?

Citizens' initiatives consist of collecting signatures in order to encourage the City Council to carry out a specific action of collective interest, providing it is within its competences.

They are therefore a mechanism that recognises people's ability to be active players in matters that affect the community as a whole, and that encourage citizens to play a leading role in defining the priorities on the city's policy agenda.

Citizens' initiatives may affect the entire city, one or more districts, or in exceptional cases, areas smaller than a district. An initiative can drive any of the following actions.

Include a point on the agenda of the Municipal or District Council Meeting

Carry out a participatory process

Hold a public hearing

Set up a new participatory body

Approve or modify a municipal regulation

Hold a citizen consultation

Hold a neighbourhood council

Who can support them?

Citizens' initiatives can be supported by anyone over 16 years old in the municipal register in the area covered by the initiative.

Initiatives can be supported by:

Signing in-person at the places designated for this purpose

Decidim
Barcelona

Signing digitally on the participation platform
decidim.barcelona

In both cases, the signature must be accompanied by the following details: name and surname; national/foreign national ID (DNI/NIE) or passport number, postcode of the area where registered and date of birth.

How are they implemented?

At least three people over 18 who do not hold an elected position and who appear in the municipal register can instigate a citizens' initiative, in addition to any entity, not-for-profit association, business association, union or professional body, provided their activity takes place within the city of Barcelona.

Natural or legal persons promoting the citizens' initiative form the Promoting Committee

To promote a citizens' initiative, the following steps must be taken:

Prepare the application

The application must include:

- The demand, territorial scope and motivation for the initiative
- Personal details, if promoted by individuals
- The minutes of the meeting approving promotion of the initiative, if being promoted by an organisation or body
- The list of people authorised to collect signatures (attestors)

Submit the application

The application and accompanying documentation must be submitted to the City Council Registry:

- In-person, to any Citizen Help and Information Office
- Online, on the platform decidim.barcelona

Collect authorisation

The following must be collected in-person from the City Council:

- Authorisation for the initiative and signature sheets
- Validation of people acting as attestors

Publication of the initiative on the participation platform decidim.barcelona

The participation platform decidim.barcelona is a space for the Promoting Committee to post information and collect digital signatures, provided by the City Council.

Specific conditions for the application and admission to proceedings of certain initiatives

- To instigate a citizens' initiative calling for a consultation, please note that:
 - The application for the initiative must contain the question to be voted on, the area affected and a description of the reasons behind it.
 - Consultations on matters that may limit or restrict basic rights and freedoms are not permitted.
 - If the matter to be presented for consultation implies spending greater than 3% of the annual municipal budget, the City Council can decide not to allow the citizens' initiative procedure to continue, or inform the organisers of the conditions required for its execution, if approved.
- To instigate a citizens' initiative proposing a new municipal regulation be passed, the initiative must be accompanied by the full text or a general description of the proposal.
- To instigate a citizens' initiative proposing a modification to a municipal regulation, the initiative must include the articles to be modified and the proposed alternative text.

Collecting signatures

Collecting a minimum number of signatures is essential to proceed with a citizens' initiative.

Signatures can be collected in-person in the spaces designated for doing so by the Promoting Committee, and digitally via the participation platform decidim.barcelona.

Signatures can be collected over a period of two months, which may be extended for a further two months with just cause.

Who can collect signatures?

Attestors – who are responsible for the authenticity of signatures – can collect signatures in-person, using the signature sheets provided by the City Council.

The Promoting Committee assigns the attestors. They must be of legal age and appear in the municipal register of any municipality in Catalonia.

There is no limit to the number of attestors, but they must sign a declaration of compliance and be validated by the City Council.

Once signatures have been collected, the Promoting Committee hands in the signature sheets. The City Council then has one month to check and validate them.

Valid signatures

Valid signatures are those from people over 16 years old who appear in the municipal register of the territorial area covered by the consultation.

A check for duplicate signatures will be carried out between in-person and digital signatures. Where duplicates are found, the in-person signature will be counted.

How many signatures are required?

The minimum number of signatures required depends on the objective and the territorial scope covered by the citizens' initiative:
